Q: Is there a way to set a default value if there is no login in ActiveRecord? Is there a way to set a default value if there is no login in ActiveRecord? Normally, you will use: @user = User.find_by_id(params[:id]) But, if the user doesn't exist, it will return nil. If I use: @user = User.find_by_id(params[:id]) || User.find_by_email(params[:id]) It won't work, because it will return both the User and nil at the same time. Is there a way to set a default value when User.find_by_id(params[:id]) is nil, or User.find_by_email(params[:id]) is nil, instead of return nothing at all? I'm looking for a solution to be able to use something similar to ActiveRecord's default association, as a user has_one: :foo, if the user is not found, I want it to be assigned to something. A: You can use.try() method @user = User.find_by_id(params[:id]) || User.find_by_email(params[:id]) @user.try(:foo) Q: List contained in map is never changed I have a Person object, I want to create a new Person and pass in the list of my dogs. My constructor returns a Person with a list of dogs. When I create a new person with dogs passed in, the constructor always creates the list of dogs with one dog. I've tried to change it with a foreach loop, but I can't seem to get it right. I also tried with for loop, but I get the same result with the for loop. public Person(String name) { person = new Person(name); List
